A History of Upper Canada College, 1829

The first hint of any military enthusiasm at UCC is mentioned earlier, when during the 1837 Rebellion, a troop of boys offered their services to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Historicist: Wicket Little Town

College boys helped to swell the crowds around the bulletin boards and added their voices to the cheers that rang out to the accompaniment of the Cathedral chimes when news of the rout of the invaders arrived. After considerable initial confusion, the two clubs discussed the situation and discovered that someone had apparently impersonated G.

As far back as 1863, when I entered Upper Canada College, and I do not know how long before, the older boys were assembled weekly for drill under the instruction of Major Goodwin. Draper seems like an excellent choice to fill this role as he was both a UCC Old Boy 1844-52 and had been a QOR officer since 1863.
