Five Ways to Use Technology and Digital Media for Global Learning

The Beliefs Expanded Belief 1: Respect for All Learners Teachers and teacher educators must respect all learners and themselves as individuals with culturally defined identities. New York: Teachers College Press. If students sense the teacher is angry, students may react negatively to that and therefore learning can be impaired.

Facts from NLTS2: General Education Participation and Academic Performance of Students With Learning Disabilities

Ironically, culturally responsive teaching as a norm must be integrated into the culture of the school. Responses that are questions Given the preponderance of teacher talk as mentioned previously, student questions might be rare or unexpected. That struggle might manifest itself in the classroom in a variety of ways -- not volunteering to answer questions, not asking for help, not speaking up in small-group activities, even not talking in class at all.

5 ways teachers can challenge inequality in the classroom

Get started to see how these can come together in your digital media projects. Articulation problems usually are readily evident to teachers, however, difficulties in language usage can be more difficult to identify.
