As of the date of this posting, thirty-one states allow minors to also consent to HIV testing and treatment without parental approval. In these states, the minimum age ranges from 12 to 14 years of age.

HIV Transmission Among Male Inmates in a State Prison System

Additional information on the 1993 program is available from state health departments. However, colposcopy is more costly, time consuming and requires specially trained personnel on hand for correct interpretation.

HIV and incarceration: prisons and detention

Sexually transmitted infections, quite common in female prisoners, and often undetected, are a major factor in the spread of HIV, as they enhance transmission as well as diminishing general resistance in the patient. This article examines the challenges to providing adequate medical care to HIV positive prisoners and discusses new models of prisoner health care that can improve HIV treatment in U.

HIV in Prison

Some issues, such as interruption of HIV treatment, are likely similar across the world. It is not known whether fingers or sex toys can lead to contamination by HPV in women or men. With the advent of HIV infection and AIDS, a new problem has arisen for women prisoners.
