Epistemology in Classical Indian Philosophy (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

They have generally forgotten central, eastern and western India Mumbai, Ahmedabad, Delhi, Jabalpur, Calcutta, Dimapur etc. Translated from the German by George Baumann with an Introductory Essay by Nalini Balbir.

Jaina Philosophy in Comparative Perspective

For instance, Babb describes how during pūjā, offerings are understood not as gifts given to the Jinās, but as gifts given up in emulation of them Babb , serving as pedagogical models for ideal practice.

RIGHT EXPOSITION OF JAINISM IN THE WEST

The Jaina thought and practices are extremist. However, surprising candidates such as non-perception for knowledge of absences and presumption defended as distinct from inference provoke complex arguments especially in the later texts—from about 1000 when the number of Sanskrit philosophical works of some of the schools begins to proliferate almost exponentially. Pluralism: Against the Demand for Consensus.

Ancient Indian Logic and Ontology. A Bibliographic Survey

Only the first three have a directly ethical or moral upshot, since ignorance is cured by knowledge, not by moral action. Indeed, Nyāya has a difficult time assimilating such knowledge to its theory of perception, in particular since the difficulty widens into what is known in analytic philosophy as the generality problem. The Bhāṭṭa argues, for example, that perception makes known only presences.

Jaina Philosophy in Comparative Perspective

Due to the infinite manifoldness of interdependencies of aspects of the word, including various temporal and spatial perspectives as well as either as either universal or particular reference a vast ranges of Properties each of them being equally justified can be predicated of a given entity with equal right And that will lead eventually to seeming contradiction. These are cases of veridical perception with an obvious admixture or tinge of memory. Readers wishing to keep up with the literature on their favourite philosopher, school or topic are invited to avail themselves of this information.

Jain philosophy

Its effectiveness lies in the degree to which it is fully inhabited, concretely actualized in the way one walks, talks, sits, eats etc.
