Instructional Materials Evaluation Checklist Example

This makes training more dynamic — sweeping the spotlight away from the trainer to the trainees. With the instructional resources I have gathered, I strongly believe that they should be included in the lessons. Books have been written on these subjects, but this blog post should give you a good place to start.

4 ESSENTIAL THINGS TO CHECK WHEN EVALUATING TRAINING MATERIALS

Identify the Language Used Is the language objective or emotional? The field-test teams' comments underscore the diversity of opinion, experience, goals, and standards that exist in the 50 states and the thousands of school systems. Note also that the difference between an opinion and propaganda is that propaganda usually has a specific agenda attached—that is, the information in the propaganda is being spread for a certain reason or to accomplish a certain goal.

Vendor Assessment / Evaluation Checklist

When they encounter difficulties in finding the particular content they need, there is a possibility that they will be no longer interested a particular instructional material which is believed to aid in their learning. Are they appropriate for your needs? Determine the quality of information of the source. Their presentation may be assisted by a student of the culture.
