Venice Biennale: choosing the artists

Moreover, 'Pandora' was inspired by Turnbull's interests in archaeological and anthropological artefacts, pre-classical forms of art and religious statuary as well as ancient mythology.

England & Co Gallery Artists

This is usually staged in the Arsenale and has become part of the formal biennale programme.

Exhibitions • Hatton History

He acquired for the Society twenty works by artists that included Terry Frost, Roger Hilton, William Scott, and sculptors Eduardo Paolozzi and Reg Butler. In May 1948 Gregory accompanied Henry Moore to Venice in preparation for the Biennale at which Moore won first prize for sculpture, and where they joined John Rothenstein on excursions to look at early Italian art. Published by Lund Humphries in 1948.

1960s

Very different was a completely new and much more brash organisation of which Gregory was a founding member: The Institute of Contemporary Arts, launched at precisely the same time as he took on executive duties at the CAS and his firm, Lund Humphries, published its first monographs on Paul Nash and Ben Nicholson. Since 1960 new members are appointed for three years in the first place, though their appointments have so far been renewed.

Hubert Dalwood (1924

The History of the Venice Biennale, Venezia, Papiro Arte, 2007.

England & Co Gallery Artists

Within a year of becoming a CAS member, in October 1947, Peter Gregory was elected to the Executive Committee on which he served until 1958, and where he took a personal interest in sculptors while his firm, Lund Humphries, published a series of books on the history of the CAS. The work is attached to a slate base with two bolts. Paintings by Merlyn Evans, Geoffrey Clarke, Henry Cliffe.
