Along the way, the Island Council will have the final say in what will be added to the final plans, and their goals are ambitious, wanting to produce 30 to 40 percent of their own energy within the next five years. On his voyage out from Europe to East Africa and India in command of the ship, Joseph et Therese, sighted Tristan da Cunha, put a landing party ashore on 2 February 1777 and hoisted the Imperial flag, naming it and its neighboring islets the Isles de Brabant.

Then, at an information session for migrant women on reproductive health and family planning, she met Patrick Bogmis. Gathering at night in groups of 9 or 10, the mice gather at the bird's nest to feast. The Dutch stopped at the island four more times in the next 25 years, and in 1656 created the first rough charts of the archipelago.
