In an effort to try to appease the King of Qin, put his son to death; however, the Yan were annexed nonetheless and the Yan were destroyed. Her personal quest revolves around her failed attempt. Qin Wuyang reportedly became so nervous that he acted almost paralyzed when entering the palace, and Jing Ke managed the excuse that his partner had never set eyes on the grace of.

Import & Export Report of Qian Ke

Jing Ke himself does not appear in the films 1996 , directed by , or 2002 starring ; but both films borrow elements from his story. Stone rubbing; 3rd century, Concealing the dagger inside the map , Jing Ke and represented the Yan as and met with King Zheng.

Jing Ke

He sometimes even holds back his own feelings and desires to make sure that Xing Yun is happy and to protect her. Knowing it was hopelessly over, the dying Jing Ke sat with his legs stretched forward , a manner then considered very rude, and used the last of his strength to taunt King Zheng with abuses.
