GENUKI: City of London Parishes & Wards, London

Bishopsgate was set on fire and the attackers came close to capturing nearby and with it the City. The reader is, therefore, earnestly asked not to take it for granted that the large cities in which he may perhaps take a pardonable pride are necessarily, in their present form, any more permanent than the stage-coach system which was the subject of so much admiration just at the very moment when it was about to be supplanted by the railways. These range from formal gardens such as the one in , containing a bowling green and bandstand, to churchyards such as one belonging to the church of St Olave Hart Street, entered from Seething Lane.
