electronic vibration pop von klein

Their neighbours on the former death-strip were the scrap-art group Mutoid Waste Company with whom they put on techno fiestas combining visual art and music. This is seen in the physical abandon and exhibitionism of the ravers. As the first float of dancers at the Love Parade approaches, a rumbling noise — somewhere between African drums and an earthquake — grows ominously louder as if emanating from the depths of the human soul.

Program detail: Symposion Dürnstein

While the rave may provide a model of a functioning democracy, it can increasingly only be enjoyed by an elite minority with the money to take part.
