Still, the Treasury Secretary maintained his own sources of information, like Brigadier General James A. Bright to Francis Jackson Garrison, 17 February 1886; Autograph Letter, Signed.

United States

He lost no time, therefore, in calling attention to his foresight; these statistics were apparently sent to newspapers in advance of the first addresses to his new constituents, 29 October 1858 in the Birmingham Town Hall. Chase must have been somewhat surprised when Lincoln himself came to his room .
