How phenomenology can help us learn from the experiences of others

In this post I want to talk about why it is so difficult to sort out good from evil and know what to believe and what actions to take. That would be effectively your avatar in such simulated reality.

Kant's Critique of Metaphysics (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

More specifically, in this section Kant turns from a general discussion of the important regulative use of the principle of systematicity, to a consideration of the three transcendental ideas the Soul, the World, and God at issue in the Dialectic. In §§19—20, Kant contends that the vehicle that brings about the synthesis at issue is judgment, and that this vehicle employs certain forms of judgment, which are in turn intimately related to the twelve categories.

Consciousness is the Unified Field

In other words: HPE researchers need to know how to learn from the experiences of others. In a superconductor, coherent collective functioning of the electrons spontaneously excludes an external magnetic field, and enables the superconductor to maintain its impenetrable status. By definition, that is exactly what the scientific method is.

In my opinion, to answer these questions, one must first understand the nature of consciousness in its various forms. First, although the co-consciousness premise S might be suggested in §16 by the following text: That relation comes about, not simply through my accompanying each representation with consciousness, but only in so far as I conjoin one representation with another, and am conscious of the synthesis of them B133 that claim is not uncontroversially made here. Consciousness is the Unified Field

The Transcendental Deduction presents general considerations supporting the applicability of all the categories to the objects of our experience; it does not concentrate on the applicability of specific categories. Baily, a major leader of the Theosophical Society, predicted the return of Christ sometime after 2025. They prove that no consistent system of logic, and therefore no physical TOE will ever be complete.

Transcendental Physics

If the movement to the idea of God, as the unconditioned ground, is inevitable, it is nevertheless as troublesome as the other rational ideas: This unconditioned is not, indeed, given as being in itself real, nor as having a reality that follows from its mere concept; it is, however, what alone can complete the series of conditions when we proceed to trace these conditions to their grounds. We call the beginning birth, the end death, and your life is what happens in between.
