Fifty Major Thinkers on Education

He eventually went to Rome and then to the Imperial City of Milan, where he became Professor of Rhetoric. He believed that a study of Church history revealed that persecution and punishment of heretics achieved no lasting good but rather led to tyranny. Now, if anybody desires to call that philosopher who instructs us fully in things and words an orator, he may do so! Grant²⁷⁴ states that Polycarp insists on his own inferiority compared to the authority of Paul and on the generational difference between the apostolic age and his time, which seems to exclude the possibility that he had written on behalf of Paul.

CHARLES SPURGEON

. The academic community has received with appreciation the contribution by F. The first of these distinctions we have seen entertained by Aristotle, but with a restraint dictated by his basic view that the residence of forms is only in concrete things.
