It is said that because of his stutter, Han Fei could not properly present his ideas in court. He met , who rallied an army of volunteers to help him fight the Yellow Turban rebels.

One night in Beijing

After arriving in Yi Province, Liu Yan was confronted with his first crisis. Although the armies of the families were powerful, Liu Yan's forces eventually prevailed. Third, Han Fei was wrong to think that human is inherently evil and only seeks fame and profit: there are humans who sacrificed their own profit for the greater good, including Han Fei himself.

Liu Yan (Han dynasty warlord)

He could not escape the trap of words for himself. Zhang Lu first killed Zhang Xiu, and after absorbing the latter's armies he successfully managed to kill Su Gu and take control of the territory, which created an independent buffer state between Liu Yan's Yi Province and the Han central government. However, Liu Yan's forces were able to successfully defend their territory from being ravaged. Han Fei did win the king's heart, but not before Li Si forced him to commit suicide by drinking poison. At this, Han Fei was frustrated with the reality that, in governing a state, the king did not endeavour to refine and clarify the juridical system of the state, to control his subjects by taking over power, to enhance state property and defence, or to call and employ the wise by enhancing the state.
