Racial disparity in the criminal justice system

It is important that differences by state be explored. The American Bar Association in 1997 called for a moratorium in executions until each jurisdiction adopts policies and procedures to ensure that death penalty cases are administered fairly and impartially, in accordance with due process.

Race and the Criminal Justice System

The report found that records were not adequately linked across various agencies; electronic tracking of key data points was also lacking. Below the screen on each part, you will find links to the powerpoints used by certain presenters. Currently, there are 21 non-federal law enforcement officers with pending criminal cases for fatal shootings.

Race and the U.S. Criminal Justice System

It is then critical to examine the sources of the disparities in order to know where to focus attention to alleviate the problems. Korematsu Center for Law and Equality at Seattle University School of Law.

Race and Criminal Justice

Respondents who select other race are asked to specify their race. And to minimize the risk that innocent persons may be executed, implementing, among others, ABA policies to ensure competency of counsel in capital cases and striving to eliminate discrimination in capital sentencing on the basis of the race of either the victim or the defendant. The panel also addressed solutions policy makers and communities can make to solve these issues on the local, state and federal level.
