The Responsibility of Intellectuals

In 1972, the rose to power and the Cultural Revolution continued. A Few Words Of Advice To The Leaders Of The CPSU During the bitter days of resistance to armed imperialist intervention and amidst the raging fires of the Patriotic War, was there ever an occasion when the great Soviet people under the leadership of Lenin and Stalin bowed to difficulties? In the Bandung period, the leaders of the Non-Aligned Movement were being actively, and for the most part successfully, cultivated and recruited into the U.

Mao and the Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

. Many of the Cultural Revolution's goals in minority areas were simply too unreasonable to be implemented.

With United States assistance, the Japanese have planned a 10-division ground force and a small air force, but for many internal reasons, including the explicit prohibition against rearmament in the Japanese constitution, the development of these forces will probably be slow. The Department of Defense brings to the United States each year roughly 6,000 foreign nationals. It is of transcendent importance that the American people understand this and also corollary fact that the security of the United States cannot be achieved in isolation.

The Culture of Power: Lin Biao and the Cultural Revolution. How is it possible for us, for any Marxist-Leninists or revolutionary people, not to feel distress? Nor am I aware of a research project devoted to the problem of how poorly armed guerrillas might more effectively resist a brutal and devastating military technology—surely the kind of problem that would have interested the free-floating intellectual who is now hopelessly out of date.

After the most violent phase of the 1960s ended, the attack on traditional culture continued in 1973 with the Anti-Lin Biao, Anti-Confucius Campaign as part of the struggle against the moderate elements in the party. This is a brazen betrayal of Marxism-Leninism! At a crucial time in the development of mass political organizing, the RCP confronted an economist-revisionist faction that also supported the revisionist coup in China. In particular, the trial of the Gang of Four took place in Beijing from 1980 to 1981, and the court stated that 729,511 people had been persecuted by the Gang, of whom 34,800 were said to have died.

The United States and its allies should exploit this situation, particularly by confronting the regime with difficult policy choices. When United States policy and objectives have been explained to the field, information officials abroad should be permitted discretion in adapting their information activities to particular local situations.
