Qur'an 7:172

By refusing to recognize this authority, the Akhbaris presented a serious obstacle to the complete domination of the Shi'i world and mind by the Usuli school or—more precisely—by its representatives; what had been a relatively polite theological disagreement intensified rapidly into a struggle for mastery over the development of post-Safavid Shi'ism in its entirety. All of the above are ways in which Twelver Shi'ism to some extent routinized the charisma of the Imāns from the third century.
