It's impossible to know, but I feel very weird.

Pirate Cemetery of Madagascar

The interview takes place with Elizabeth in 1873 within the house. It is that stone that is there today, containing no mention of the horrible fate that befell this poor child.

Common Burying Ground and Island Cemetery (Newport)

A nightly watch was instituted to try and catch a glimpse of what they felt could be the ghost of one of the poor unfortunate sailors. Once she was dead, she turned her attention to her son Jimmy, whom she pounded on the head with the blunt side of the hatchet before taking her knife and slitting his throat.

New Anglo

Several thousand Confederate soldiers died from disease, exposure, or malnutrition while detained here. As noted before, the most famous individuals to live in the haunted mansion was Elizabeth Oakes Smith and her husband Seba. The story that would unfold from this senseless and brutal murder would grab the attention of the entire nation and make newspaper front pages and wire services from coast to coast.
