Each was entitled by treaty to send troops to Korea, provided that notice was given to the other. Drawing on decades of research in newspaper articles and editorials, journalists' memoirs and essays, it tells the story of Japan's newspaper press from its elitist beginnings just before the fall of the Tokugawa regime through its years as a shaper of a new political system in the 1880s to its emergence as a nationalistic, often sensational, medium early in the twentieth century. The Japanese government of that time was wholly intolerant of any injury done to its subjects by foreigners.
