Subsequently they performed tympanometry successfully in 88% of the children, and in 26% the diagnosis was changed. General medical practice can be carried out both individually and in a group, including with the participation of narrow specialists.

MN Court Rules

General practitioners are skilled in managing uncertainty, undifferentiated illness and complexity, able to utilise best practice evidence in the light of individual circumstances, and engage patients and families in understanding, planning and managing their health according to individual capacities. Given the minimal research in telephone GP consultations as an alternative for face-to-face GP consultations, it is difficult to make conclusions on the effectiveness of such programmes, especially in a new setting like Australia.
