The search service was able to confirm 473,013 civilian deaths; there were an additional 1,905,991 cases of persons whose fate could not be determined. In some places in times of epidemics, as many as 50 a day died. Their land and property was forcefully taken from them while they were absent, and were not allowed to return to their homes, they were expelled in absentia so to speak.

ethnic cleansing of Germans

As you, as you wrote, do actually not care at all what I tried to say I guess I do not have to waste my time by giving further explanation. Interviewees for the Royal Commission on Alien Immigration believed that Germans were involved in prostitution and burglary, and many people also viewed Germans working in Britain as threatening the livelihood of Britons by being willing to work for longer hours.
