Infantry in Vietnam was a Higher Percentage of Draftees

So many times as I walked point nothing would take place, but as soon as I was relieved from point, the replacement would get KIA or vise-versa. By the end of 1969, however, the SPIW was still purely experimental, and no such weapon was available to the infantryman fighting in Vietnam.

9th Infantry Division Unit Histories (Vietnam)

These TOE's added an air defense section to the headquarters company of all three types of battalions, which was organized to use the new Redeye guided missile system a manportable, shoulder-fired, low altitude, antiaircraft weapon. Like POINT Make it a slow walk, A British slow march Listening to the jungle Busy jungle denizens Noisy in their livelihood Or by omen sullenly quiet Eyes moving always Straining toward intuition The land is insidious Foliage always conceals Low built bunkers Or a dangerous enemy The single sniper Hit and run teams All these possibilities While walking on point Tactics made each step Strategy abounds planned In one minute intervals One lone distant walker Leads the company Moving through jungle The commander monitors Orders and recommends Diligence means survival First in line of march Responsible for his brothers This walker becomes The hostile environment He must be the trees The trails the brush The mind of the enemy This lone distant walker. The 90 men included six officers one an FO , and five senior sergeants.

What did Vietnam Soldiers carry?

By the, end of 1969 this recommendation was still under study by the Army Staff, but TOE's were already being prepared for the new headquarters and combat support companies.
