Violin Concerto in E minor, Op.

Mendelssohn: Violin Concerto in E Minor, MWV O 14, Op. 64

The orchestra then plays a variation of the opening melody, after which the music moves into a short development section in G major. This movement is in with an opening theme requiring fast passage work from the soloist. In a typical Classical concerto, the cadenza is improvised by the performing soloist and occurs at the end of a movement, after the recapitulation and just before the final coda.
