The Truth about Whaling

You want to be powerless as you are leaning into hurricane winds or with your eyes closed or looking into the ocean. Gray whales are suckers, they literally suck amphipods from the bottom of the ocean taking in mouthfuls of mud and food before forcing the water, sand and mud through their baleen as they capture their prey. Given the difficulty in growing crops in the Faroe Islands, which are situated in the North Atlantic, much of their food has to be imported from other countries.

What Differences Are Their Between Whales and Fish?

Not so with The Bible.

Subsistence Hunting, Alaska Department of Fish and Game

Have students research assigned whaling topics. Here are some extraordinary facts about whales and their lives in the oceans. Basilosaurus shows the link or intermediate between whales and their terrestrial ungulate ancestors.
