Leard, and that he had implicated Lincoln McGeisey.

Seminole Burning

Employment was provided by pencil factories, but the cedar tree population soon became decimated and white families moved away in the 1890s and settled in the nearby town of Sumner. Hiding behind a wall of silence and fearing reprisal for identifying their executioners, virtually the entire white community became involved with the ghastly execution. Entries for each writer are arranged chronologically.

Seminole & Creek

Many Rosewood citizens fled to the nearby swamps for safety, spending days hiding in them.

Seminole Burning

It was shown that Mathis had knelt and prayed with the Indians just after they were fastened to the stake by chains.
