Wisley Action Group

I do not accept that there has been sharp practice or that anything unethical has been done.

Wisley Action Group

What I find quite astonishing, is to learn from Mr Skinner that the Wellington LN715 was adapted to test the turboprop Rolls-Royce Dart, which became famous for powering the Vickers Viscount. They get an identical score. Of two types, the de Havilland DH98 Mosquito and the American Grumman TBF Avenger.

Awful, and a total waste of money

Both the propellers on the port engines have been feathered to reduce drag.

Wisley

XF114 was kept back and later used for wet runway trials in July 1962 at Wisley and other airfields and is now preserved at the Southampton Hall of Aviation. Taken at Northolt Airport, Ruislip, Middlesex, England 29 July 1950 prior to the departure of the world's first turbine powered scheduled commercial service, flight number BE392X2 to Le Bourget Airport, Paris, France.
