This often proved impossible to collect because most of the children were homeless.

Hidden Lives Revealed

. The clear distinction between Industrial Schools and Reformatories was that the children sent to Industrial schools were destitute and those sent to Reformatories were juvenile offenders.

The UK's Industrial Strategy

One of the earliest attempts to start an Industrial feeding School, as they were at first called, was in Aberdeen in 1846. All children needed care and protection especially those who had been given such a

However because of the growing number of children it soon became necessary to have paid members of staff.

ERIC

He said the schools had been able to find employment for many of the children and they were taught to be careful with their money. This gave magistrates the power to sentence children between the ages of 7 and 14 years old to a spell in one of these institutions.

Hidden Lives Revealed

The schools were given this name because the children who attended had only very ragged clothes to wear and they rarely had shoes. In the beginning many of the schools were started by the Churches and were staffed by volunteers.

ERIC

Locke detailed all the things achieved by the ragged schools and the difference it had made to the children who attended.
