Scholarship, Value, Method, and Hermeneutics in Kaozheng: Some Reflections on Cui Shu (1740

Rénmen xuà� huòdéle jùdà de ziliào láiyuán zhè liang gè zhíng pù zài zhèyàng de huánjīng hé zhèngquè wéihù chānpín de shòuhòu fúwù, tamen shì nǐ gòumai. The sheer mass of material and the abundance of complexities one has to consider when dealing with authors who stand at the end of the long line of development of traditional Chinese culture make it improbable that one can find new answers to the basic problem of the relationship between scholarship and value without first having reduced these complexities to the limited scope of case studies.
