London Is Twice As Old As Previously Thought

And the text itself is composed in short, choppy, bland sentences, apparently aimed at the bored sixteen-year-old who knows nothing about the history of the country, much less the city.

10 secret historical sites beneath London

The joy of mudlarking is that you never know what might turn up or where. Various miscast and incomplete metal objects give an idea of the goods being manufactured, such as enamelled mounts, a military belt buckle, and probable armour, including possible lorica segmentata fittings.

London's Big Dig Reveals Amazing Layers of History

Beneath the surface, however, this otherwise unremarkable Sussex market town is charged with an unlikely religious zeal. Londinium was equipped with massive defenses: several forts were built along with the immense London Wall, remains of which are still recognizable in the city.

Revealed: The story of the silk and gold clad woman buried in London's Spitalfields 1,600 years ago

Even now, after globalisation upended the economics of that business, there are around two dozen flower farms still in operation — most of them on St Marys and a few on the northernmost inhabited island, St Martin's.

Mass dig of 60,000 skeletons from 230

While they have protected the village from crashing waves, they have also changed the continuous movement and of sand, pebbles and stones that have previously hidden the stumps from view.

The Havering Hoard: Baffling Bronze Age Artifacts Found in London

The teams were called into action to repair the river wall and subsequently not one of the hits resulted in a major flood.
