This is not to endorse the notion that somehow ending capitalism automatically ends racism, patriarchy or other forms of structural oppression, but to reaffirm the point that to the extent that capitalism continues the defeat of any of those interlocking systems is impossible. Perhaps my favourite quote encapsulates for me a Ujamaa by Julius K Nyerere, is a collection of essays and pamphlets, a mix of ideals and strategies for establishing the new Tanzania on a socialist foundation of mutual aid and equality. Public dissent was at times met with enforced disappearances and prison without charge or trial.
