The Anthropology of Time by Alfred Gell

What determines, to a great extent, the course of events in this or any other possible world is the space-time geometry of the environment. Husserl begins by considering the views held on the subject of time-consciousness held by his teacher, the introspective psychologist and proto-phenomenologist, Brentano. ### Time, Space and Islands: Why Geographers Drive the Temporal Agenda*

Anthropological reviews or summaries of the field 51, 71, 127a, 164 are both sparse and, with the exception of Gell's 62 major new study,' relatively superficial despite the importance of the topic. Now what is the origin of this differentiation? There is, however, a possible let-out. The imbalance is even greater if we are to assume that the old grandfather does not work, and that the mother undertakes a large proportion of the 12 hours of child care demanded.

These data simplified give the following breakdown of activities and the time devoted to them in a 24-hour cycle: Activity Hours per day Sleep 8.

The Anthropology of Time

Our happiness depends on mastering time and transcending it, but time is us: as Borges 1970 says, 'time is the river which carries me away, but I am that river; time is the tiger that devours me, but I am that tiger'.

What we can know, on the other hand, is that images formed from perceptual information are consistent with images generated from our maps of the 8-series temporal territory. Protentions are continuations of the present in the light of the kind of temporal whole the present seems to belong to: 'To be aware of a developing whole incompletely, and as it develops, is yet always to be aware of it as a whole: what is not yet written in, is written in as yet to be written in' Findlay 1975: 9.
