The second Achaean League was established in 280 BC. In the east, the unwieldy Seleucid Empire gradually disintegrated, although a rump survived until 64 BC, whilst the Ptolemaic Kingdom continued in Egypt until 30 BC when it too was conquered by the Romans. It had over 200 each powered by 170 oarsmen who were seated in 3 rows on each side of the ship.

At the same time, Greek Sicily was invaded by a Carthaginian force. Rapidly increasing population in the 8th and 7th centuries BC had resulted in emigration of many Greeks to form in and , and further afield. In the intervening period, the poleis of Greece were able to wrest back some of their freedom, although still nominally subject to Macedon.
