Labour Markets in the Arab World

Science and learning have been recognised in earnest by the Muslims that they were not the God given gifts to one race or entity, and that instead all nations and creeds and colours shared in genius and creativity. Human Development Report 2010: The Real Wealth of Nations: Pathways to Human Development. And many of the scientists under Islam have nothing Muslim about them.

Shihab-Eldin, The Science and Technology Management. The Europeans overwhelmed local indigenous tribes in the Americas and Oceania: Indians, Aztecs, Mayas, Australian aborigines, Maoris, and settled those lands with people of European descent, creating new countries, modern day: America, Canada, Australia, New Zealand... The Western people both in Europe and in their new lands also industrialised and built greater power, which allowed them to conquer the now weak Muslims.

Science and civilisation, until fairly recently, on the other hand, have received little attention. The process began with the Humanist movement of the late Middle Ages-early Renaissance. In addition, you'll find great book recommendations that may be of interest to you based on your search and purchase history, as well as the most wished for and most gifted books.

Labour Markets in the Arab World

And that was the first, and by far, the most multiethnic culture and civilisation that had ever existed, and not equalled in many respects, even today; not even in countries and institutions which keep advertising their equal opportunity status.

Labour Markets in the Arab World

In brief, the Middle Ages were indeed the times of Muslim superiority, and so they had to be darkened; blotted out preferably.
