Before building work began on the hospital site, Wessex Archaeology was asked to excavate for possible remains. The absence of coal however meant that during the Dorset was unable to compete with the large mechanised mills of Lancashire and so remained largely rural.

Our Work

Arguably Mærleswein and other rebels must have waited until a revolt developed that had a reasonable prospect of success. The evaluation area comprised the garden of Chesham Bois House and the Church Field, the field adjacent to St.
