Raleigh and the Throckmortons. (1962 edition)

It demonstrates how the manuscript was altered for publication, to focus its appeal to investors in gold mines for which Raleigh had very little evidence. Nicholas, a fourth son born in 1515 or 1516, was a clever boy who had been brought up in Royal households. Also includes an 8-page color insert.

At the time Empson was in high favour with the Crown but on the death of Henry VII he was thrown into prison by Henry VIII for constructive treason, and convicted at Northampton in October 1509. Here for the first time Intiaz Habib collects the scattered references to black people- whether from Africa, India or America- in sixteenth- and seventeenth-century England, and arranges them into a systematic, chronological descriptive index. Throckmorton, whose elder brother William, born in 1546 was a lunatic; inherited from his parents a high social position, wealth, and estates in Northamptonshire, Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Warwickshire and Worcestershire, and the manor of Paulerspury, Northamptonshire.

Raleigh and the Throckmortons by A. L. Rowse

A find of exciting interest to all Elizabethan scholars, it yields valuable new information in 1962, of the missing centerpiece in Raleigh's life- his secret marriage to Elizabeth Throckmorton, maid of honor to Queen Elizabeth I; the birth of a child not known to history, at whose baptism the Earl of Essex later Raleigh's mortal enemy stood sponsor; and Raleigh's disgrace and imprisonment in the Tower. In accordance with his wishes a memorial was erected to him, extolling his piety, character and wealth.

Arthur THROCKMORTON

Here the Throckmortons were established in the later Middle Ages, were certainly to be found in the thirteenth century, cultivating their fields, making their marriages, being gathered to their fathers in the churches of Throckmorton and Fladbury. He was anti-Catholic, in 1599 suggesting it was necessary to restrain and disarm not only recusants, but also those whose wives refused to go to church.

Cosgrove

In 1487, the Manorial rights of Cosgrove, along with those of Paulerspury, Tiffield and others, had been conveyed to Henry VIII by Anne, Countess of Warwick.
