Moral Responsibility in the Holocaust: A Study in the Ethics of Character

Slote asserts that he does not advocate implementing an obligation to be empathic. The Restoration of the Self.

deontological ethics

Christians can use this occasion for apologetic or evangelistic opportunity, accentuating that morality presupposes the absolute personality God and the community created by him the human world, or the church. In the light of our common humanity, it would not be appropriate—in fact it would demean our humanity—to place limits to our moral duties or responsibilities.
