Morris Cowley & Oxford tourers, saloons and coupe.

It was essentially a budget version of the with less chrome, no heater, fixed front and a simplified dashboard. The remainder of WW 9204 which hails from Yorkshire incidentally looks to be as per the manufacturer's sales catalogue, although I think the front tyres once sported a little more tread than is the case here.

It was much more successful than the 1921 version. By this point in time, the usual circular Morris badge affixed to the radiator surround had been replaced by a rectangular type with small wings on either side. The history of the Bullnose and Flatnose Morris cars has been told times without number.
