That last shop, selling scarves favored by such customers as the Queen of England.,

Paul E. Ceruzzi. Internet Alley: High Technology in Tysons Corner, 1945

Ceruzzi is Curator of the National Air and Space Museum, Smithsonian Institution, Washington DC. Abstract Internet Alley is much more a book about regional history than about politics, economics, or history of technology, yet it draws extensively on all of these fields.

Internet Alley: High Technology in Tysons Corner, 1945

The issue concerned the degree to which the ORO involved itself in the political, as opposed to purely mathematical, aspects of operations research. At the center of that corridor is Tysons Corner--an unincorporated suburban crossroads once dominated by dairy farms and gravel pits.

Internet alley : high technology in Tysons Corner, 1945

Ceruzzi explains how a concentration of military contractors carrying out weapons analysis, systems engineering, operations research, and telecommunications combined with suburban growth patterns to drive the region's development. In From Tysons Corner to Internet Alley, Paul Ceruzzi examines this compact area of intense commercial development and describes its transformation into one of the most dynamic and prosperous regions in the country.
