They spend significant amounts of time researching issues, developing strategies, and then implementing them in communities. You will need to know where the power of your opponents lies, and how you can most effectively influence or confront it. This chapter will help you get launched.

Advocacy

Partnerships—especially with members of the community in which one is trying to create change—are particularly important. The COVID-19 pandemic has exacerbated this already-large divide. For example, suppose you are planning to make life difficult for retailers who sell cigarettes to kids, and you know that the American Cancer Society, a couple of local youth groups, and a pair of enlightened churches have the same goals.
