Pediatric Physiotherapy Approaches and Other Interventions It would be presumptuous to assume that any one approach to pediatric physiotherapy treatment is the only right, proper and effective measure to use. Community Paediatric Physiotherapy in North and South Lee is for any babies, toddlers and children aged 0-6 years who need physiotherapy to help improve their movement skills, and so have improved activity and function. It is normal that children develop at different rates to their siblings and friends, and not always a cause for concern.

Strengthening Exercises

Background and purpose Little evidence is currently available on adherence to home physiotherapy within paediatrics.

They have specialist knowledge in the movement, development and conditions that are likely to affect the baby and growing child and treat from 1-day-old babies to adolescents. They will inevitably work within the context of the child and his family and have opportunity to work with the child in a range of situations extending into home, pre school groups, education and leisure activities.
