Gays, Lesbians and of

This exploratory study compared separation-individuation in children of lesbian and heterosexual couples, examining how the presence of a female co-parent, rather than a father, might 1 facilitate or hinder a child's intrapsychic separation and 2 affect girls and boys differently.

Family Tree

It recognizes and illustrates the adage that it takes a village to raise a child or grow a tree. Journal of Child Psychology and Psychiatry, 45, 755-764. Heterosexuals' children had a more aggressively tinged separation.

adolescents using more decision-making coping had higher SE in the face of high-perceived stigma. But I'm so happy that I can finally share this inner peace I've found since coming out to myself, by coming out to others who understand.

How I Came Out to My Evangelical Christian Parents And You Can, Too

The rise in same-sex parenting is partially due to the increase in options available for same-sex couples to become parents. This study examined associations among family type same-sex vs.

Same

Like lesbian mother groups, gay father groups were deeply concerned with custody and visitation loss, but most of the fathers did not have custody, and many of them were in danger of losing their parental rights completely.

Frontiers

The National Lesbian Family Study: 4. In all types of dual-parent families, parents were sought by their child for different activities.
