Valikhanov reports that the number of Qing troops in Kashghar was 5,500 in total. Who was he and on what grounds could he become the leader of the rebel army? Instead, they began to negotiate, asking the insurgents to disarm within three days as the terms of capitulation. This is not surprising in view of the fact that his father, Suo Wen, had been the leader of a religious sect in Salar and maintained contacts with Tungan religious leaders in various regions through his emissaries.
