The Dutch Rethink the Welfare State

In addition, the training and education programs states offer are often inappropriate for the needs of individual recipients. As a result of these restrictions, many immigrants have left the rolls, and the living conditions of these poor families continue to decline. Major means-tested food assistance programs include food stamps; the Women, Infants, and Children WIC food program; the school lunch and breakfast programs for children under 185 percent of poverty; and The Emergency Food Assistance Program TEFAP.

Providing stronger financial incentives with state EITCs and enhanced TANF earnings disregards are also possible, although the latter policy will keep families on the TANF rolls longer. The study highlights the need for stronger quality assurance measures in the implementation of TANF to ensure consistency in the distribution of support services across racial and ethnic groups. In this context, a major role of the modern state is the provision of an appropriately trained, educated, housed and disciplined labour force available to employers when and where necessary.
