Kokugan

Since in this is the place, and since the Way pervades everywhere, the reason that the limit of what is knowable cannot be known is that this knowledge arises and is penetrated simultaneously with the complete accomplishment of the Buddha-dharma. Enlightenment does not destroy man any more than the moon makes a hole on the surface of the water. The TANAKA Kikinzoku Kogyo K.

Tanaka

The bird is life and the fish is life. When the dharma has already been rightly transmitted in oneself, just then one is one's original self. When buddhas are really buddhas, they do not need to recognize themselves as buddhas.

Kokugan

When he looks at the boat under him, he realizes the boat is moving. It is like a jewel. In order to understand various types of viewpoints we must study the numerous aspects and virtues of mountains and oceans, rather than just circles.

thezensite: English Translations of Genjokoan

Life is the bird and life is the fish. Similarly, when human beings die, they cannot return to life; but in Buddhist teaching we never say that life changes into death. Ash abides in the phenomenal expression of ash, which fully includes before and after.

thezensite: English Translations of Genjokoan

Life is an individual temporal state, death is an individual temporal state. But we are enlightened Buddhas and express the Buddha in daily life.
