MacNeill: The Irish Volunteer

First British ammunition A Derry man whose sympathies were with Ireland found himself in the British Army and while in Ebrington Military Barracks he manoeuvred to get some ammunition for the Volunteers. The Defence Forces buttons on other uniforms still show the letters I V for Irish Volunteers.

Patrick Pearse

They were convinced that a republic could only be gained by force. On 28 September 1912 at Belfast City Hall almost 250,000 Unionists signed the Solemn League and Covenant to resist the granting of Home Rule.

The Irish Volunteer (1914)

With British troops being dispatched from Ireland for the war with the American colonies, the landed gentry reacted nervously, and misunderstandings arose about Ireland's defence capabilities.

The Roscommon Volunteers

The debacle on Moore Street sums up the situation. Indeed, the building of this chapel was largely paid for by the Belfast 1st Volunteer Company.
