Book, 1999. Between 1731 and 1765 more and more slaves were bought from Madagascar.

History of slavery and early colonisation in South Africa

In the wars which they fought against the Khoi and the San, the Boers frequently followed a policy of exterminating the mature adults, but capturing the children and raising them on the farms. Since slaves were kept in a state of slavery against their will, the slave owners and the VOC needed a system of laws to ensure that slaves were kept in their subordinate position.

Tourism

In precolonial times, division of labor between the sexes and the generations was well defined, and this is still the case in many rural black communities. As educational opportunity has expanded for black citizens, a gradual shift from a racial to a class-based division of labor has begun, and there is now a growing black middle class. Burton 1979 The human needs theory was introduced to debunk the other theories that attribute causes of conflict to the innately aggressive nature of human beings.
