Police Casualties, 1919

While it was not clear in the beginning of 1919 that the Dáil ever intended to gain independence by military means, and war was not explicitly threatened in Sinn Féin's , an incident occurred on 21 January 1919, the same day as the First Dáil convened.

Police Casualties In Ireland: 1919 1922 by Richard Abbott

In April 1922, an executive of IRA officers repudiated the treaty and the authority of the Provisional Government which had been set up to administer it. When the General Post Office in Dublin was seized on Easter Monday, the rebels declared a free Irish Republic, independent from Great Britain. In 1919, 11 RIC men and 4 detectives were killed and another 20 RIC wounded.

Police Casualties in Ireland: 1919

The remaining Irish Volunteers, under , held that they would maintain their organisation until Home Rule had been granted. For almost seven weeks, Collins and the mutineers struggled to reconcile their differences in the midst of the Irish Civil War.

Royal Irish Constabulary

Symbolically, this was intended to show that was untenable. RIC members were threatened, and many were attacked, leading to substantial resignations from the force see figures below. The biggest single loss for the IRA, however, came in Dublin.
