Bias Correction, Quantile Mapping, and Downscaling: Revisiting the Inflation Issue in: Journal of Climate Volume 26 Issue 6 (2013)

As a consequence, also the sequence of events is taken from observations, the method is essentially a multivariate delta change approach. Such dust serves as a host for microorganisms and has been implicated as a risk to human health.

Coordinated Global and Regional Climate Modeling in: Journal of Climate Volume 29 Issue 1 (2016)

An important implication of this approach is that it requires the RCM community to apply its climate change analyses not only to the output of their models but also to the output of the driving GCMs. During the last few years, however, some satellites with more extensive purposes of observation of the Earth have been launched: some of the instruments they carry also supply meteorological information. Time series for selected seasons: top DJF and bottom JJA.

It allows questions such as, what is the probability that the X response falls within the range X 1 and X 2? These results provided confidence that this configuration of CanRCM4 could be used for the CORDEX used to downscale global climate model contributions to CMIP5.

Calibration and bias correction of climate projections for crop modelling: An idealised case study over Europe

First, the development of bias correction methods that are explicitly designed for downscaling.

Coordinated Global and Regional Climate Modeling in: Journal of Climate Volume 29 Issue 1 (2016)

We aim to provide a robust approach to obtaining input data for crop models in the face of limited data to simulate effortlessly various phenomena and estimate the potential implications of climate change for South African crops. Coordination offers benefit to the development of physical parameterizations and provides an objective means to evaluate the scalability of such parameterizations across a range of spatial resolutions.

A comparison of how different methods handle the representation of trends can be found in ref.

If this transferability between time-scales cannot be established for the given application, one could either clearly communicate that no plausible climate change trends could be provided, or better try to derive an expert guess based on the model results and process understanding.
