However, certain limitations in migration data and data linking migration and urbanization prevent researchers and policy makers from fully understanding the impact of migration on cities and how moving to a city affects migrants.

Impact of Rural Nebraska Industrial Development on the Migration by Armin K. Ludwig, Gene M. Hanlon et al.

International Organization for Migration IOM 2016 , IOM, Geneva. Marc Ghislain shares his views on how the young people can be part of the solution and more importantly in the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goal number two. Other motivations, not recorded in the migration stock data in Part 1, include transit to the North and petty trade.

Turning the Tide on Urbanisation Policy in the Pacific Islands

In the Micronesian atoll nations of the Marshall Islands and Nauru, over 70% of the inhabitants live on the main islands, where their respective capital cities are located. About 38 percent of identified South-South migrants come from countries with higher incomes than their host country. Examples of these cities include Dhaka, Mumbai, Seoul, Lagos, Tokyo, Accra, New York City, Cairo, Shanghai-Suzhou, Sao Paulo, Karachi, London etc.
