Traveling toward sunrise by Lettie Burd Cowman

The sun coming up every day is a story.

Refraction at Sunrise & Sunset

It reminds us that time is moving ever forward and that change is a constant of life. Anyway, I have decided that it just takes to much energy to keep envisioning what might happen at any moment so I have been just closing my eyes! The book is informative and readers seeking a mostly nuts-and-bolts portrait of a trip through the Intracoastal will find it meets their expectations. I have asked Him to speed up or complained because He was driving to slow! Because of refraction, the Sun may be seen for several minutes before it actually rises in the morning and after it sets in the evening.

You can drive to Campobello Island from the US, but from mainland Canada you have to take a ferry actually 2 ferries. Forty miles west and 120 miles north of West Quoddy Head, Mars Hill Mountain is only 2 miles east of the Canadian border. Maybe there are multiple interpretations of this unusual passage.
